Hey there!

I'm Konrad and I've spent over 10 years working with developer focused products and various developer ecosystems, driving real quality and growth for them.

Started my career in tech by organizing the biggest student hackathon in Europe which later on led me to my first software engineering gigs. After that, by combining my passion for software and developer ecosystem I dived into the DevRel world, which eventually turned to senior and close to C-Level strategy related, tech programs and product management role that I've held at Oxla recently.

All my career till now was focused around dev tools, building them, driving product growth through product management as well as being responsible for shaping product marketing and GTM strategies for various sizes of companies I've worked at till now.

Being passionate about innovation in current AI driven times, through craft I always strive for the real quality both through my work as well as evangelizing others with the same approach.

Let's have a real impact on this world together!

Konrad